DWR Officers and State Park Rangers Conduct Joint Enforcement Training

June 09, 2011

Utah Division of Wildlife Officers and Biologists teamed up with State Park Rangers for joint training at Sand Hollow Reservoir on 6/7/2011. The purpose of this training was to provide basic aquatic enforcement information and to ensure consistency between the two agencies.

DWR Lieutenant Scott Dalebout reported that "State Park Rangers contact many of our constituents in the field. Its imperative that they understand fishing regulations and are equipped to handle any violations they might encounter."

There are similar training sessions occurring throughout the state.

Enforcement officers with the Utah Division of Wildlife have conducted fishing enforcement training for Utah State Parks and Recreation Rangers at locations throughout the state.
